

Bäredriewerfäscht - Our village festival since 1978

The nickname "Bäredriewer" is anything but a problem for us Durmersheimers. On the contrary! We are very proud of this reputation and also deal with it offensively.

That might have been the trigger for the "Durmerscher Bäredriewerfäscht", celebrated for the first time in 1978.

Under the then mayor Heinrich Bauer, a concept was quickly found in which the Durmersheim clubs and groups would play a leading role.

The participants developed a great sense of community by pouring most of their fixed proceeds into a common pot. The purpose was to build a barbecue and rest hut on the edge of the Hardtwald.

The "Bäredriewerhütte" has been a popular place for resting since 1979 and has also become an ideal place for celebrating beautiful forest festivals.

A sense of community paired with honorary commitment and an awareness of a tradition worth preserving are still in demand today and again, so that our "Durmerscher Bäredriewerfäscht" has a future in the years to come.

In the following departments we want to show photos of the first Bäredriewerfeste 1978 - 1981 - 1984, on which one can rediscover oneself and other well-known persons some years later.

We presented these pictures at the 14th Durmerscher Bäredriewerfäscht 2017 in cooperation with the Film- und Fotoclub Durmersheim as an exhibition in the Bürgersaal of the town hall. The public response was overwhelming.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank the Film- und Fotoclub Durmersheim, namely Harry Brummack and Peter Pawlik, for a successful cooperation.
